

NOTES

All information is correct as of August 8, 2011, including new codeshare route changes to be in effect between August and September 2011 that has been loaded in the GDS. Some routes may be left out due to discrepancies or not appearing in GDS timetable display, airline inventory system or OAG. This list includes 202 airlines around the world, with over 1600 pairs of partnership (duplication), covering nearly 16000 routes (duplication).

Codesharing is a practice in the airline industry which 2 or more carriers share the same operating flight, which is differ from Interlining. Codeshare includes either blocked-seat arrangement or free-sale.

Majority of the Codeshare Routes do not have local traffic rights, while some are available for online connection traffic purposes. Selected Destinations are intermediate or technical stop where codesharing carrier does not have traffic rights, but listed to display actual routing. All Codeshare Routes are subject to change and may operate on certain period and/or one-way basis only. Same-day connection is not guaranteed and not all flights on a specific route carry codesharing carrier's flight number.

Carriers operating under major airline's brand is not considered as codesharing (ie: Skywest for UNITED Express; Regional by AIRFRANCE) since they operate under mainline brand. However, the list includes those codeshare routes' operator is by regional/franchise carriers (ie: KLM operated by Skywest as DELTA Connection).

Routes operating with leased aircraft from other carriers are not listed, as well as ground transportation such as bus connection or limousine arrangement. Rail codeshare is included but specific routes will not be mentioned. Codeshare flights on Cargo service are excluded.

This Codeshare list is compiled by airlineroute. For latest update and information, please visit the website. Also visit RoutesOnline for latest airline update. Consult with the airline directly for latest changes.

Airlines in all Capital letters is the Codeshare carrier, proceeded by the actual operating carrier
